

Together

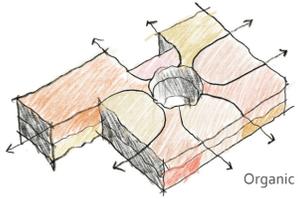

Together is an experiment in opportunity and restraint, repair and healing, and ultimately a new community. It is a unique chance to breathe new life into a place with solid bones that has suffered from disrepair and a recent lack of purpose in an age of expediency and 'newness'. We conceive of the existing building as a living, breathing ecosystem, with a myriad of activities and uses co-existing in a unified, light filled, airy and comfortable space. Key to unlocking this potential is to introduce a large central courtyard to the middle of the building. This simple gesture liberates the otherwise broad, dark and monotonous floorplate and effectively creates a series of smaller spaces, radiating organically around the 'Landscape Lungs', the central green courtyard. This arrangement dramatically increases the proximity of people within the building to natural light, fresh air, and nature, and provides an intuitive and joyful way to circulate around the building.

All visitors enter the building as it was originally designed, from the west up the ramp. However, now users pass wild grasses and landscape indigenous to this place. Upon entering, the double height space which once let light in from above for the lobby only, now acts as just the first part of an arrival sequence. The lobby/gallery draws visitors through to the landscape lungs, and invites them to circulate around and into each of the dedicated community spaces. Occupant's orbit around the landscape lungs, coming and going in a continuous flow of interaction and movement. In this way, individuals, landscape and community are intrinsically linked together. The various building systems such as a closed-loop water system, solar array on the roof, and thermal envelope improvements all work, together, to form a space capable of delivering on the LBC 4.0 initiatives.

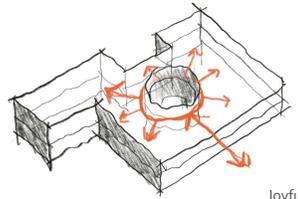

It's a community building that embraces the hopeful notion that new life and a better future can be brought about by simple, healthy principles. It's about imagining a place where we can work, learn, make, play, heal, and ultimately thrive, Together.
